

POINTS TO PONDER

- It really takes no faith to believe that God can heal, but you've got to settle in your heart if He is willing to heal.
- There are things that happen behind the scenes we don't see, or we don't know. We don't know what people believe, or what decisions they've made, but no matter what has happened, whether it seems like a faith failure or not, it doesn't change God's will to heal.
- Modern-day Pharisees, or the religious crowd, have no problem with the fact that our sins can be forgiven, but healing for anyone who asks it is a different story.
- People are approaching God for healing like they're approaching a loan officer for an unsecured loan. They don't realize the price has already been paid and it's already been deposited in their spiritual account.
- When you approach God for forgiveness, or when you lead someone to the Lord, you don't ever question that God would or would not forgive that person. However, if they don't see that healing has also been paid for in the Atonement, they won't have the same confidence to receive it as well.
- I refuse to carry or bear what Jesus died to free me from. The Atonement and finished work of the cross is a complete package.
- Not everyone receives salvation automatically—they have to believe. The same thing is true with healing.
- Exousia is like the badge of a deputy that gives him jurisdiction to enforce the law, and he has the backing of the entire police department. Dunamis is like the gun, the taser, the handcuffs, or the car that is used to bring criminals into jail to protect the citizens. The police chief is not going to do the job of the deputy. The chief of police is going to say, "I've given you authority, arrest him."
- You've got to drive the enemy, sickness, disease, and pain out of your body. The devil is a trespasser, and you have authority over him.
- Bob Nichols made this statement, "The first report is not the last report."
- Deny problems the right to have final authority in your life. Until you make God's Word the highest authority, it will not have complete authority in your life.

- I call my body, “Healingville.” I’ve been given delegated authority, and delegated authority trumps functional authority. It has a higher value than the functional authority of a doctor.
- You’ve got to run doubt out, and you’ve got to stand your ground, even when the symptoms try to prevail. You’ve got to keep exalting the truth above the facts, and the truth will prevail.
- You cannot receive from God with your eyes on the calendar or on the clock.
- Every prayer of faith, every step of obedience, and every confession of the Word where you are exalting the truth above the facts is another swing of the sword of the Spirit that will eventually cut you completely free from sickness, disease, and pain.
